RNI partners with Hord Family Farms

RNI, Inc. has recently partnered with Hord Family Farms by placing our first client within their company. Hord Family Farms is a 5th generation pig, cattle, and grain farm located in Bucyrus, Ohio. The farm's main focus is their pig breeding and birthing program. They work hard to ensure the health of their animals by focusing on a plant-based diet consisting mainly of corn and soybeans. The animals are given the necessary vitamins and nutrients for each stage of growth so they grow to be strong and healthy livestock.

Hord Family Farms has teamed up with Clemens Food Group and several other family owned pork producers in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. Together, they built a state-of-the-art fresh pork processing plant which opened in 2017 and employs around 800 people. Their pork products are sold primarily in the East Coast Region of the United States, but have been spotted in Ohio.

Denay, a recent high school graduate, was referred to Richland Newhope Industries, Inc. for assistance with finding employment best suited to her. Denay grew up around many animals and wanted to continue working with and learning about them after high school. She worked with a job developer who was able to find her employment in an area she was interested in. She has begun her first job at Hord Family Farms. Denay has had the help of job coaches as she learns her duties at the farm. They assisted her with learning the routines of the farm and the processes for completing each of her daily tasks. Denay works directly with the piglets and sows. She is learning first-hand just how much work goes into taking care of the new born piglets.

Denay begins her shifts early in the morning at the farm by showering and changing into sanitized clothing and boots. During her day, she is responsible for a variety of tasks ranging from timing the birth rate of piglets to assisting sows during birthing. When the birthing team needs additional assistance, she is there to help after delivery by giving the piglets necessary vaccinations and ensuring each one is latching to their mama to nurse. While this has been a challenging job, Denay continues to work hard learning the ropes.

When asked, Denay says she really likes all aspects of her job and couldn't think of any part she didn't enjoy. RNI, Inc. looks forward to continuing to support Denay and work with the team at Hord Family Farm.
